Fund Description

The Pekada Vega - ESG Ranked Model (the Model) is built and monitored using deep fundamental research on both asset allocation and fund manager selection. The portfolio applies its environmental, social and governance (ESG) investment strategy and process to underlying investment selection. Asset allocation considerations include long term forecast returns for each asset class, as well as volatility and correlation. We then find exceptional managers that we believe work together to deliver on the Model's objectives. The composition of the Model will change from time to time, based on economic and market conditions, ongoing research, as well as a result of continuous monitoring of both current and potential fund managers.

Market Commentary

Global equity markets extended their rally in the September quarter, with the unhedged MSCI World ex-Australian index up 6.8%. At the global sector level, Information Technology was the best performing global sector for the quarter, adding 11.1% over the quarter, followed by the Materials (+7.4%) and Consumer Discretionary (7.2%) sectors. The Consumer Staples sector was the lowest performing global sector, falling 3.0%.

The US equity market continued to perform well, with the Dow Jones Index posting six new closing highs and an intra-day high above 46,700 and the S&P 500 reaching new closing highs in September. Of note, the 'Magnificent 7' stocks accounted for almost two-thirds of the S&P 500 total returns during September.

US company earnings often dominated the financial news headlines in September, typically printing above expectations. Investors were pleased that some retailers increased their 2025 guidance, with sales for Q2 tracking well above previous management guidance. In some instances, this was expected to continue, with many companies announcing plans to pass higher tariff costs on to customers via future price increases.

Australian equities returned 4.7% over the quarter, which was partly driven by a strong rally in Materials (+20.5%), as the gold industry spiked, helped by a booming gold price. Utilities also performed well, returning 11.4% for the quarter, and the Consumer Discretionary sector also produced a healthy return (+10.0%). The defensive sectors, Healthcare (-9.3%) and Consumer Staples (-1.5%), were the lowest performing sectors. Energy (-1.5%) was the next lowest performing sector, with the quarterly return drawn down by September (-9.7%), where returns plummeted on the back of falling crude oil prices and a collapse in a foreign takeover bid for Santos.

In bond markets, the US Treasury market posted a positive return as yields ended another volatile quarter lower, particularly at the front end of the curve. In the UK, 30-year government bonds finished the quarter at 5.5% which is close to the highest level since 1998, due to persistent inflation and political uncertainty. European bond market volatility increased, following political developments in France.

Portfolio Commentary

The Model returned 3.86% for the quarter, underperforming the peer group benchmark by 0.77%.

As investors begin to price in tariff implications and position themselves for the possibility of consecutive interest rate cuts, growth assets delivered another strong quarter with Australian Small Caps leading the way. The Australian Ethical Emerging Companies Fund was the standout performer, returning 12.90%. Elsewhere, the Global Equities sleeve delivered strong outcomes with the Robeco Global Developed Sustainable Enhanced Index Equity Fund and Nanuk New World Fund both returning 6.12% and 5.74% respectively. Outcomes across the Model's defensive exposures were also broadly positive.

Underperformance was largely driven by several Australian Equities managers who delivered more subdued returns for the quarter. The Betashares Australian Sustainability Leaders ETF returned 0.38%, while the Schroder Australian Equity Fund returned 3.26%, both underperforming the benchmark. The Janus Henderson Global Sustainable Equity Fund also detracted from quarterly performance, posting a 1.59% return.
